COMMITTEE DENIES IT CLEARED INMAN

Speaker in Defense of Gen. Knox Makes Use of Fact that Committee Did Not Mention Capt. Inman Whereupon Committee Gets Together and States in Effect that Inman May Expect Being Called to Account.

The Sentinel takes the following from the reported proceedings of the house on August 14 while that body was sitting to consider the investigating committee's report on the charges made against Attorney General Rush Knox and Capt. Cecil Inman, former chairman of the state tax commission and brother-in-law of Ex-Gov. Dennis Murphree. It appears that Mr. Price from Chickasaw county was making a heroic defense of the Attorney General and that he referred to the fact that the investigating committee brought no charges against Capt. Cecil Inman, and that he had been informed that the committee exonerated Mr. Inman, the inference undoubtedly being that if Knox is guilty so is Inman, and that the impeachment charges against Gen. Knox are largely political. The investigating committee immediately got together and flatly denied having exonerated Capt. Inman, and stated that gentleman is not now in office hence he could not be impeached. It is generally understood that the courts will be asked to call Capt. Inman to account. The report denying exoneration of Inman is signed by every member of the committee, and reads as follows:

"We, the undersigned, being members of the standing committee of the House of Representatives to investigate state officers, and one of the attorneys for said committee, do hereby solemnly correct the statement of Representative Price to the effect that we, or any of us, told Cecil E. Inman that the committee exonerated him or W. M. Denny, Jr. (inheritance tax agent during the Inman regime), in its investigation of the official conduct of the attorney general. None of us ever told or stated to Cecil Inman anything directly or indirectly to this effect.

"The committee regrets the placing of an improper construction on its failure to mention Cecil E. Inman in its reports filed to date; the said Inman not being now in office."

REVIVAL BEGAN MONDAY AT ADVENT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Evangelist W. F. Jamison, of South Dakota, formerly pastor of a church at Miami, Florida, began a revival campaign last Monday at the Bethel Advent Christian Church on the Duck Hill and Alva highway.

Day services are being held at 11 a. m. and messages of instruction along the lines of Bible study as well as generally inspirational are being given by the evangelist who in the past 30 months has held evangelistic meetings in North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama, with 19 weeks of straight preaching at four different places in his home county in South Dakota, this past winter.

Mr. Jamison conducted a four weeks' meeting in Kilmichael last June since which he has been in Birmingham, Ala., preaching and singing over the radio in the "Radio Revival" of Station WBRC and in South Carolina for a two weeks' meeting. Upon his return to Mississippi, this young evangelist brought a still younger person, D. B. Steedly, a 15 year old "little minister" who proved a great inspiration to the crowds at Edwards Springs Church near Eupora where last Sunday marked the close of two weeks' splendid meetings.

"D. B." speaks at the services with a fluency that is astounding and his prayers as well as testimonies never fail to prove a blessing.

Night services have been marked by large crowds, and everything points to a great blessing for everyone.

Bible reports are being taken at each night service and everyone is urged to read at least one chapter a day. Monday there were nine persons that reported having read 38 chapters during the past week. Tuesday however there were twenty-four persons reporting 117 chapters in the 24 hour period.

There will be three services Sunday. Everyone is invited to come.

HOMESEEKERS ARE GUESTS AT ROTARY CLUB MEETING

Two homeseekers from the central part of Illinois, brought to Mississippi by the Rev. Mr. Martin, of Louisville, Miss., who has been for the past two months in the employ of J. T. Thomas, president of Grenada Bank, in the capacity of interesting northern folk in locating in Mississippi, were guests at the Tuesday luncheon of the Rotary Club. Mr. Martin addressed the club, telling of the nature of his work and the progress he had made. He said that he had thirty more families interested in coming to Mississippi but that it would require at least two more weeks to get them down here and, since his trade with Mr. Thomas had expired, he would have to look elsewhere for funds to defray his expenses which, he stated, would amount to $150 or $200. The president of the club, B. J. Anderson, appointed a committee of three to see how the people of Grenada felt about the proposition and to see if the money could be raised here.

One of the homeseekers, Mr. Teeters, spoke for a few minutes. He said that he was most favorably impressed with what he had seen in Mississippi and he said that he knew of many families that were looking for better locations. He seemed to think that Mississippi could give these homeseekers what they wanted since the taxes on land in Illinois, he said, are way too high.

Prof. John Rundle made a brief but most effective plea for the continuance of the Boy Scout movement in Grenada which has died out for lack of a scoutmaster. He suggested that the local Rotary club combine with one or more other clubs in hiring an all-time scoutmaster to divide his time between the boys of the various communities.

Rev. James Watson, of Louisville, Miss., a Rotarian, was present at the meeting.

Representative Talks Of Things In County

Hon. J. N. Provine, interviewed by Hon. Edgar S. Wilson, Writer of Note, Discusses Conditions in Grenada County—Says Dairying and Poultry Industries Making Progress—Pays High Tribute to Sentinel.

The following is taken from "Mirrors of Mississippi" by Hon. Edgar Wilson, one of the most gifted writers and best posted men on the political history of Mississippi within the state. The article was carried in the Jackson Daily News of August 5.

Hon. James Neely Provine, representative from Grenada county, who is serving his first term in the Mississippi house of representatives is regarded as one of the most alert, fearless and conscientious members of that body. Representative Provine is a native of Calhoun county, the son of Hon. R. N. Provine, who represented with ability Calhoun county in the house of representatives in 1882. Hon. R. N. Provine, who is now in his 90th year, entered the Confederate service as a lieutenant but served until the flag was furled at Appomattox as captain. The life of Captain Provine is a part of the best history not only of Calhoun county but of the entire section. He was the father of eight sons and one daughter. Seven of the sons are living and are among the leaders in their respective communities, one of them being Dr. J. W. Provine, president of Mississippi College at Clinton. Mrs. Provine, the charming and popular wife of Representative Provine, is paying him a visit.

Representative Provine is a member of the committee on Ways and Means, Pensions, Census and Appropriations and Fees and Salaries. He is prompt in attendance upon committee meetings in which he takes an active and influential part. He realizes that if a new congressional apportionment is made by the legislature in 1930, being a member of the committee on Census and Apportionment, he will have a strenuous time as the lessening and increasing of congressional representation is always fought with intense rivalry on the part of incumbent candidates and those who hope to succeed them.

"The people of Grenada county," says Representative Provine, "are thoroughly aroused to the fact that forest fire, are burning up perhaps their best future asset, the same being cut over lands which have a fine growth of young pine trees. Already representatives of paper mills have visited Grenada county and looked over the amount of available young pine used as a pulp for the manufacture of paper. Likewise representatives of shoe last companies have inspected the second growth of gum with a view of utilizing the same for the making of shoe lasts.

Power Companies Establish Bureau

Electric Companies Unite to Form Bureau to Aid in Industrial, Agricultural and Commercial Development of Mid-South—C. L. Shelby to Head Bureau—Will Cooperate with Local Development Organization.

To assist and cooperate with chambers of commerce and other civic organizations in the expansion of existing industries, establishment of additional factories and the further industrial, agricultural and commercial development generally of Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana and West Tennessee is the purpose of the Southern Industrial Engineering Bureau, established by the Arkansas Power and Light, Louisiana Power and Light, Mississippi Power and Light, West Tennessee Power and Light and New Orleans Public Service companies. The bureau will be in charge of C. L. Shelby, who has been with the Illinois Central Railroad as an industrial agent engaged in special industrial development. The headquarters of the new bureau will be in Memphis. Its activities will be directed by a board composed of Harvey C. Couch, T. H. Tutwiler, Frank M. Wilkes, W. J. O'Brien, John Wisdom, H. B. Flowers, L. V. Sutton and McGregor Smith, officials of the power companies cooperating in the maintenance of the industrial development organization.

The plan of the bureau is to serve as the agency by which the opportunity and the opportunity seeker will be brought together, the activities to cover the utilization of raw materials and secure new industries in the territory as well as to aid in the marketing of such products of factory and farm as are not being sold to the best advantage and to encourage the production of such commodities as the experience and studies of the bureau determine can be produced and sold profitably.

The facilities of the bureau are to be available to all communities in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and West Tennessee, without cost or expense to the communities for any services rendered.

"It is our purpose to assist and cooperate with the chambers of commerce and other organizations engaged in community development, and endeavoring to secure new industries," said Mr. Shelby. "We are associated with engineering firms in New York, Boston, (Continued on page 8)

SAYS BATS HUNTED FOR THE METHODISTS SUNDAY NIGHT

The Sentinel's good friend, Mr. J. J. Hardy, gets off a rich piece of humor at the expense of the Grenada Methodists and the seeming attachment of bats for the Methodist church during the hours of night service, in the summer.

Mr. Hardy states that he feels he knows the bats have been coming to the Methodist church for the past 100 years, yet they have never been sprinkled or poured. While Mr. Hardy did not say so, yet it is easy to read in his mind that he believes that the ministers who have served that church have done no bat preaching, otherwise these pests would have been converted, or certainly suitably disposed of. Time and nature have trimmed the top of Mr. Hardy's head until it may be termed "a hairless wonder", hence it will be better understood why he is more or less apprehensive of bats. Some church members, it will be remembered, are easily scared—why?

But the main point of this story is yet to be told. Mr. Hardy avers that at the union services held at the Methodist church last Sunday night, the bats made their usual visitation but, after circling around the walls of the auditorium a number of times and finding none but Presbyterians, Baptists and Episcopalians present, they left evidently in disgust—what tale they may have told about the Methodists who did not come can only be conjectured, therefore Mr. Hardy's idea that the bats are Methodist, has some show of support by his last Sunday night experience.

CLOSES WEEK'S REVIVAL AT PROVIDENCE CHURCH

The revival at Providence Baptist Church last week, in which Dr. W. E. Farr, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Grenada, did the preaching, resulted in twenty-two additions to the church. Real old time religion was in evidence during the meeting and the people of that community received much spiritual benefit from the services.

CLUB WILL MEET TODAY

Members of the Young Men's Business Club are asked to remember the second August meeting which will be held today (Friday) at noon in the basement of the Methodist Church. A full attendance is earnestly desired.

GIVES GREENWOOD BIG PRINTING PLANT

Lawrence Printing Company Equipped by But Three or Four Other Plants in State. Now in Ruling and Binding. Constantly Adding to Equipment.

A recent issue of the Greenwood Commonwealth contains the following highly complimentary mention of the Lawrence Printing Company of that city: With the installation of the very best and most modern ruling machine by the Lawrence Printing Co., this gives Greenwood a printing establishment capable of handling any order that could be handled by any other plant in the state. There are only three or four other plants in Mississippi so equipped and Greenwood business people are fortunate in being able to get right at home that class of work which they have never been able to do before.

In addition to the ruling machine and as companion equipment, they have installed a modern electric gold stamping machine and book press, together with the necessary accessories to handle the ruling, printing, binding and lettering of county records and other books.

California Ranch, Crops, Described

W. M. Crane Tells What Is Planted on Big Property and How Different Kinds of Hay Harvested—Buyers Come to Ranch to Take Purchases to Market—Cattle and Poultry Business—Contrast with Mississippi Interesting.

Editor Grenada Sentinel: Your paper reaches me weekly; I enjoy almost its every line.

I thought maybe many of your readers might be interested in a rough description of what is called here a "California hay and grain ranch". At home we would say "farm".

I am going to use the farm where I am now engaged, that of Chas. Silva, as my subject. This ranch is fairly typical of the average.

The Silvas are a Portuguese family composed of Chas. Silva, Mrs. Silva, four sons and three daughters. The boys all work on ranch, the girls have positions in San Francisco. Mr. Silva came to California as a young man with nothing but his health and strength and a very remarkable ability to earn, save and make safe investments.

All of his struggles on the road up would fill a very interesting book and would serve to show what pure gameness can do.

The ranch is composed of about 1200 acres, 300 of which are on high ground. The balance is reclaimed land, taken from the tide flats of San Francisco Bay and is well protected by levees. Rain water is pumped off by a 30 inch pump getting power from lines of Pacific Gas & Electric Co. whose main lines run through the ranch. The ranch is 30 miles north of Frisco in Sonoma county, and is cut through by Northwestern Pacific R. R. A station (Reclamation) is on the ranch. A highway right through the ranch and a good road (that is soon to be hard surfaced) to Petroluma.

The climate is pleasant all through. The nights are cool and there are seldom any real hot days. Rarely have a drop of rain from May 1st to October, though did have a couple of light showers in May and June this year.

Only 10 horses are used. Nearly all plowing is done with two caterpillar tractors, a 60 and a 40. Hay cutting starts about May 1st. The hay crop is for the most part oats cut in milk stage. Volunteer hay has some oats, wild oats and rye grass. This rye grass makes extra good hay for cows and is in great demand. The wild oat is good hay but is very light. It is of great value though for winter grazing and grows everywhere and never fails to reseed itself.

The lands in this section are plowed during the winter and seeded to grain, mostly oats, though some wheat and barley. Real oat hay is in great demand for horse feed, but dairymen prefer volunteer hay so a good deal of land is left unplowed, only plowed every 3 or four years.

The land is so rich that barn fertilizer is never used but is often burned to get rid of it.

The grain is now all harvested, threshed and sold to dealers who are trucking it right from the fields. The crop on this ranch turned out a little over 6000, (six thousand) 100 lb. sacks mostly oats, which were sold at $2.00 per sack. Even the straw is sold but we have to bale that yet. It is sold at $8.00 per ton.

We are now baling hay—there will be something over 700 tons all sold from this farm at from $15 to $20. The hay presses used here are something new to me and I think are only used out here. They are built upright and put out bales weighing from 25 to 325 (Continued on page 8)

Some of Methodist Laymen of Grenada Think Bishop Cannon Should Be Tried

Sense of Obligation to Church and Cause of Christian Religion Make Grenada Laymen Go on Record for Speedy Trial of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., on Public Charges against Him, Resolutions State—Some Knotty Questions Suggested as to What Bishop's Example Very Naturally Prompts Others to Do—Rev. J. H. Holder, Pastor, Called Official Board Together Thursday Morning at Which Meeting Complaint Was Made against Some of the Press and Resolutions Passed Regretting Action of Certain Laymen unday.

There are evidently some Methodist laymen in Grenada who agree with many of the leading laymen of the M. E. Church, South, throughout the realms of the Southern church, that some spirited and speedy action should be taken without waiting until the general conference of the church, now nearly a year off, in regard to charges of stock gambling and other things against Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

It was announced by Prof. John Rundle, Men's Bible class teacher, at Sunday School last Sunday morning that Dr. J. S. Sharp had requested that the laymen of the church meet in the new Sunday School building that afternoon at 4 o'clock. There was a comparatively small attendance at Sunday School that morning, only about 50 per cent of the Sunday School enrollment being present. There was no service that morning in the Methodist church, hence it may be assumed that not many of the laymen knew of the meeting. Just before the hour set, it began to rain and the roar of thunder could be heard, hence the weather, it is surmised, kept some away. Any way there were present only the following: Wm. M. Dubard, Dr. J. S. Sharp, J. A. Roane, R. W. Sharp, E. A. Penn, Sam C. Mims, Jr., Sam C. Mims, Jr., A. T. McElwath and O. F. Lawrence. Dr. J. R. Countiss, was also present just to look on. Prof. John Rundle and Mr. Lafayette Adkinson arrived shortly before the meeting closed, hence they did not vote on the resolutions which follow and which were passed by a vote of 5 to 3. Those voting for: S. C. Mims, Sr., Dr. J. S. Sharp, J. A. Roane, A. T. McElwath and O. F. Lawrence. Against: W. M. Dubard, R. W. Sharp and E. A. Penn. Hon. S. C. Mims, Jr., presided over the meeting. Besides those who were present and gave approval to the passage of the resolutions, several others have given the paper their approval by attaching their signatures. The action taken was favored by the president of the board of stewards, Dr. R. A. Clanton, and by his immediate predecessor, Dr. C. K. Bailey, and by the president of the board of trustees of the church. The three physicians of Grenada who are members of the Methodist church favor the action taken. Besides these a number of others have given the resolutions their approval by attaching their names to the paper. These men evidently feel that they are acting for that which is best for the Methodist church and in the name of those lofty standards which leaders in spiritual affairs have held aloft for generations past.

Dr. Countiss read copiously from Bishop Cannon's recent lengthy statement made in his own defense and urged that the meeting then in session was unnecessary. He did not vote on the resolutions.

The resolutions, which follow, speak for themselves:

There are times in the affairs of men which demand that they should not sit with sealed lips, and (Continued on page 8)

GEORGE B. JONES DIES IN MEMPHIS

Services for George B. Jones, 46, who died at his home, 1375 Agnes Place, Friday night, will be held at 3 p. m. Sunday at the J. T. Hinton & Son funeral home. The Rev. O. W. Bradley, pastor of St. John's Methodist Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Forest Hill Cemetery. Mr. Jones had been in ill health for several months. Mr. Jones was general manager at Memphis for the N. O. Nelson Manufacturing Co. He was a prominent worker in the Chamber of Commerce, Mason, Shriner and member of the Colonial and Rotary clubs.

Mr. Jones was born in Grenada, Miss. He moved to Memphis 20 years ago, taking charge of the Nelson offices here. Later he also was given control of the branch office at Jackson, Miss., operating it in connection with the Memphis office.

Mr. Jones is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Tillie Eustace; daughter, Maybell Lea; six brothers, R. B. and F. H. Jones, Memphis; E. A. Jones, Rayville, La.; J. P. Jones, Sidon, Miss.; J. M. Jones, Albuquerque, N. M.; and C. B. Jones, Cleveland, Miss.; sister, Mrs. Ralph King, Greenwood, Miss.

The above taken from the columns of one of the Memphis newspapers carried the story of the death of a man born in Grenada some forty-five years ago. He was the third son of G. B. Jones, who was for several terms sheriff of Grenada county and deservedly one of the most popular men of his day. The subject of this sketch left Grenada shortly after reaching his majority, but he was most pleasantly remembered here and it is a genuine satisfaction to the community to know that he was held in such high esteem by those with whom he was most closely associated. To the benefit The Sentinel extends sincere sympathy.

LOCAL NINE TAKES LEAD IN SERIES WITH WINONA

In a game on the Winona diamond Wednesday afternoon, featured by the pitching of Slim Brewer for Grenada and the hitting and all round fielding of the entire Grenada team, Grenada conquered Winona to the tune of 3 to 1. This gives the locals a one game lead over her rivals in games played this season. Of the eight played, Grenada has won four, lost three and tied one.

Shores pitched a good game for Winona Wednesday but Brewer had him outclassed.

The two teams are meeting on the Grenada field as The Sentinel goes to press. Hot Moore, of Senatobia, was scheduled to go in the box for Grenada and Possum Moore, also of Senatobia, is behind the bat for the locals. The third game of the final series of the season will be played this (Friday) afternoon in Grenada, the toss-up to decide where the final game would be played having been won by Grenada.

SUICIDE IS VERDICT IN DEATH OF THRASH

Body of Young Business Man, Missing Since Sunday Morning, Found in Woods South of Grenada Monday Afternoon after Search Participated in by 300 Men—Remains Forwarded to Cleveland for Interment.

The body of Lewis E. Thrash, 28, who had been missing from his home here since ten o'clock Sunday morning, was discovered at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon after an intensive all day search participated in by three hundred Grenada men. The body was found in the woods five miles south of Grenada, about 1/4 mile east of the old Grenada and Carrollton road where he had abandoned his car. Death was caused by a bullet through the heart, fired from a .38 special, which was lying by his side.

His shirt was unbuttoned and the left sleeve of his underwear had been removed. The bullet entered in the center of the left breast and pierced the center of his heart. Suicide was the verdict of the coroner's jury. Thrash's coat was neatly folded on the ground by his side, his hat was placed on the coat and in his hat were his glasses and fountain pen, together with the following note: "Tell Wells to sell stock. Love to Weaver and Patricia." Wells, whose initials are M. W., is one of the auditors for the Grenada Bank system, and has an apartment in the home occupied by the Thrashes. He and Thrash were close friends. Weaver refers to Mrs. Thrash and Patricia is their four-months old daughter.

Thrash left his home early Sunday morning, telling his wife he was going to Sunday School. Instead he went by his office to go over the morning mail and did not attend Sunday School. He was last seen at ten Sunday morning head, south. When he failed to return home Sunday night, his wife became uneasy and efforts were made all over this section to locate him. Police officials were notified and WMC, broadcasting station of the Memphis Commercial Appeal and Evening Appeal, was asked to broadcast news of his disappearance.

At ten o'clock Monday his car was found abandoned on the public highway, a seldom used road, south of Grenada and the search for him began.

The stock referred to in Thrash's farewell note was General Motors stock bought outright as an investment several months ago. It has recently declined slightly but not enough to give him any financial worry. His affairs were in excellent shape and his accounts and records at Imperial Motor Co., local Buick agency of which he was the head, were found to be accurate and up to date. Those close to him and in a position to know attribute the cause of his act to mental aberration due to the strain of overwork. He had not had a vacation for some months and he was apparently an indefatigable worker.

Thrash came to Grenada three years ago from Cleveland to take charge of the Buick agency here. He had made a splendid impression on the community and was regarded as one of its most outstanding young business men. He was careful about his business and personal obligations and enjoyed a splendid reputation in every way. He was a regular attendant upon church services of his denomination, the Methodist, and took an active part in all community activities. He was a native of Alabama but had been in Mississippi for several years. Mrs. Thrash, to whom he was married five years ago, was Miss Weaver Betts. She is the daughter of Mrs. W. F. Meeks, of Bovle.

Funeral services were conducted from the Methodist Church at Boyle Wednesday by the Rev. J. H. Holder, pastor of the Grenada Methodist Church, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Bennett, pastor of the Boyle Methodist Church, and R. L. McLeod, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Grenada. Interment was had in the cemetery at Cleveland.

Other relatives, besides his wife and infant daughter, survive, to all of whom The Sentinel tenders condolence.

MANY OPEN COTTON BOLLS

Open bolls of cotton have been pouring into the office for the past week, but it is believed that the first was brought in August 10, by Mr. L. F. Tribble, who lives somewhere on rural route 1, out of Cascilla. The cotton is of the Delfos variety. Mr. Tribble states that he has much cotton open and that picking will begin with him very shortly. He is a sturdy farmer and is what the book men call an "individual farmer". (Continued on page 8)

North Carolinian, 60 Years a Methodist, Brings Indictment Against Bishop Cannon

Hon. Charles W. Tillet, of Charlotte, N. C., Holds Up to Public Gaze What Bishop Cannon Has Done—Says Bishop's Betting on Stock Market Has Given More Encouragement to Gambling than Anything that Has Happened for Three Generations—Says Bishop Violated North Carolina Law and Cites Record—Offers His Threescore Years of Fidelity to Methodist Church as Evidence of Sincerity—Wants to Know of Laymen if They Are Going to Sit Perfectly Still and by Their Silence Sanction Bishop's Conduct—Intimates that Temperance and Social Service Board of Church is Sometimes Quite Political and that Inasmuch as Bishop is Chairman of This Board, It Is But Natural that It Should O. K. His Tergiversations.

The Sentinel is passing along to its readers the statement below, which recently appeared in the News and Observer of Raleigh, N. C. and which was written by Hon. C. W. Tillet, an outstanding lawyer of the Tar Heel state and a Methodist for over 60 years. Mr. Tillet is a brother of Dr. Tillet, one of the editors of Sunday School literature. The Sentinel's apology for giving this communication space is, in brief, that it discusses a moral question that concerns the whole country and because this paper thinks if the proper action is not taken by Methodists about what is being charged against the Bishop, much of which he practically admits and seeks to excuse or justify, that all church life will be seriously marred.

What Mr. Tillet says follows:

Bishop Cannon and the Stock Market

Last week within the borders of the city of Asheville—"Pearl of the Blue Ridge"—there sojourned for a while the most widely known prelate in Southern Methodism, Bishop James Cannon, Jr. He was bound for Junaluska, the summer home of Methodist learning and doctrine where also politics is not always eschewed.

In Asheville the cautious bishop would speak "nary a word" to any newspaper man. His knapsack bulged with documents which he was eager to present to the Methodist Board of Temperance and Social Service, of which board the bishop is chairman. The entire afternoon of the day he arrived at Junaluska was spent by the board in going over "numerous documents and written statements" presented by the bishop to the board.

And did those matters then and there considered by the board pertain to the temperance and social service work of the Methodist church? Well, the meeting appears to have been behind closed doors; at least no curious, sharp-eared newspaper man got a word as to what the documents and statements of the bishop contained, except that they related to recently disclosed stock dealings of the bishop in New York, which dealings (so the board declared), had been used by the "enemies of prohibition" in an effort to discredit the bishop's character and influence.

The Board of Temperance and Social Service, after considering the documents and the statements of the bishop, gave its O. K. to his transactions, passed a unanimous vote of confidence in him, and roundly denounced all who would intimate that this eminent prelate had done anything that was the subject of criticism.

Get the setting, please: A Methodist bishop having episcopal authority equaled only by that of the Pope of Rome, presented to the board in secluded conclave, a board of which he is chairman, composed in large part of Methodist preachers, documents and statements which the public was not allowed to see. Upon this evidence the board gave the bishop its unqualified endorsement, with warning that individual, who dared criticize him would be classed as "enemies of prohibition," and that newspapers giving utterance to adverse reflections would thereby automatically align themselves with the "wet press."

To my way of thinking that resolution of the Board of Temperance and Social Service was an unadulterated piece of "white-washing" as ever occurred in our ecclesiastical or political history; and the dogmatic language used was as bold an attempt as ever was made to intimidate and bulldoze into silence the press, the pulpit and the pew.

Moreover, by the ukase of this Board of Temperance and Social Service an attempt has been made, wittingly or unwittingly, to give the approval of the church to what is commonly called "bucket shop gambling." I who have been a member of the Methodist Church for three-score years claim the right to be heard in protest. If there be found in this article any untrue or incorrect statement of fact, or any argument erroneous or unjust from a legal or moral standpoint, I will gladly welcome any correction or refutation. But be it known unto all that any attempt to ignore my facts and arguments and to berate me and impugn my motives will be met in the manner all such methods of wrangling deserve. This is not the first controversy in which I have been engaged.

Of all the vices of humanity—drinking liquor not excepted—I regard gambling as the most vicious and demoralizing, and it fills me with indignation that the Bishop's transactions and his defense of his conduct backed up by the resolution of the Board of T. and S. S. have given more encouragement and stimulation to this vice than anything that has occurred in the two generations that I have lived in North Carolina. I do not touch a drop of liquor and I believe in the enforcement of the prohibition laws. I do not gamble and I believe in the enforcement of laws against gambling. Indeed, the nearest that a single cent of my money has ever come to going into a gambling transaction was when Bishop Cannon after receiving his salary as Methodist Bishop (part of which I paid) transmitted his check to his friend and confidential adviser, broker Harry Goldhurst (supposed son of a Rabbi) to be used in what the Bishop euphemistically calls "an installment payment on stock investments."

The Bishop's illegal speculations were bad enough, but far worse in my opinion has been the attempt to camouflage his dealings and make them appear as lawful stock investments.

In order to show the true character of these transactions, it is only necessary to re-state the facts, taking them out of the Bishop's own mouth or from statements hitherto uncontradicted by the Bishop or any of his friends.

Let us see: As you doubtless know, a bucket shop broker is one who does not deal in actual stocks and other commodities but merely "bets" with his customer whenever an order is received. The Bishop's aforesaid confidential adviser, Harry Goldhurst, manager of Kable & Company, is now under prosecution in the New York Federal court for fraudulent use of the mail in his business of bucket shop broker.

The testimony as reported at the trial in New York the other day was to the effect that the Bishop had never owned a single share of stock. Indeed, so far as I have seen, there is no claim on the part of the Bishop that he ever owned a single share of the thousands of shares of stock that he professed to buy and sell nor indeed, that his brokers, Kable & Company, ever had a single share of these stocks in their possession. That is important fact No. 1.

It is more than significant too that several of the Bishop's so-called purchases of stock through Kable & Company were entered on their books as having taken place on Sunday. This does not mean that the Bishop violated the sacred day by sending in orders, but it undoubtedly shows that these sons of Jacob whom the Bishop had selected as brokers were doing business on Sunday and that they entered up the purchases of the Bishop as having been made on Sunday. Everyone knows that no actual purchase of stock could have been made on Sunday and this clinches the proof that no actual purchases were made or intended and that all that was done by Kable & Company when the Bishop sent them an order was to make an entry on the books according to the custom of bucket shop brokers, making it appear that a purchase had been made though no purchase was made or intended.

The statement given out by the Bishop to the press was that he had for many years—to use his own language—"openly" bought and sold houses and lands, timber, stumpage, coal, cotton and bank stock and stocks and bonds listed on the stock exchange." He further stated that his payments were on what he called "the monthly installment purchase plan."

Transcripts from the books of Kable & Company published in the New York papers show that the Bishop had bought stocks aggregating (at par value of $100 per share) something more than $775,000 worth, and that his total payments aggregating only $2,500 or about $3.25 on the hundred. The naive statement was also made that the astute Bishop customarily held his stocks a few weeks before selling in order to get the benefit of any rise in the market.

Well, if the Bishop really thought that what he was transmitting Kable & Company constituted actual payments for stock on the installment plan although he never finished paying in full for a single share of stock and although he sold hundreds of shares before he paid for them, then all I have to say is that the Bishop may have a very profound mind in things theological, but when it comes to buying and selling stocks through concerns like Kable & Company the Bishop's mind is infantile or at least extremely juvenile, and so long as he deals thus, he does well to continue to place the suffix "junior" after his name and to subscribe himself always—James Cannon, Jr.

Is it not perfectly apparent then that what the Bishop was really doing was giving orders to Kable & Company for the purchase and sale of stocks for which he was putting up "margins" averaging about $3.25 on the $100 worth? And is it not further apparent that he never owned a single share of the stock which he now professes to believe he was buying as an "investment"?

But I beg you note also that according to the Bishop's own statement quoted above he has been dealing in cotton. It cannot be doubted that he has been speculating in cotton in the same way that he has conducted his stock transactions. If so, he has not bought a single bale of actual cotton but has been gambling on the price of cotton which is the one commercial evil that has brought disaster to our Southland. Think of it, will you! A Southern Methodist bishop gambling on the price of cotton. Angels and ministers of grace defend us!

But, some may suppose that I am unduly harsh in using the word "gambling" in connection with these transactions. I appeal therefore to the law which I confidently submit has over and over again pronounced as "gambling" transactions precisely like those of the Bishop. In my long career as a lawyer I have had many, many transactions of this character brought before me by clients and I have invariably advised that all such were illegal, immoral and against the public policy of our State.

If you are in doubt, I beg to refer you to the recent case of Welles vs. Satterfield, 190 N. C., 89. (129 S. E. Rep. 177) where you will find that the legality of a transaction, substantially similar in all respects to the transactions of the Bishop, was brought before the court. The opinion in the case was written for the court by Judge Heriot Clarkson. This judge quoted the statutes of North Carolina showing that under our law pretended purchases or sales of stocks, cotton and other commodities upon "margins" where there is no actual delivery or intended delivery, is considered to be gambling. Speaking for the court, he said:

"The Legislature in its wisdom has seen fit to pass a drastic act to stop this kind of gambling or vicious contracts, no doubt fully aware of the wreckage to the human family. The mischief the act is intended to prevent is plain—that no one should get something for nothing, or nothing for something."

Judge Clarkson also calls attention to the fact that under Section 2147 of the Consolidated Statutes of North Carolina, all who engage in such transactions are guilty of a criminal offense—mark that, will you, a "criminal offense"—against the laws of North Carolina, and may be fined or imprisoned.

But didn't Judge Clarkson—long renowned as an apostle of righteousness, and business integrity—hit the bull's eye? Certainly the taproot of all gambling whether that of "bishop or boor" is avarice; for "the love of money is a root of all evil," and Bishop Cannon in betting on the price of stocks and cotton was consciously or unconsciously attempting to get something for nothing.

If some super-technical defender of the Bishop would remind me that the dealings of the Bishop are not to be tested by the laws of North Carolina, it is sufficient reply to say that he is a Bishop of Southern Methodism which includes North Carolina Methodists; and if he is not willing to have his conduct tested by the code of laws and morals adopted by this good old state, then let him stay out of North Carolina. None of us North Carolina Methodists wants as Bishop one who in spirit if not in fact has been violating the civil and criminal laws of our state.

Comparatively few of you may know that before the Bishop took on himself the holy vows of the church he stood before another bishop and for the purpose of separating him from the world and worldly things he was asked to respond to this solemn question: "Do you promise to devote yourself wholly to God and his works?" To which he answered, "I do." Tell me I pray which of the "works of God" the Bishop was promoting when he was studying the market reports with a view to speculating in stocks, cotton and other commodities and when he was putting up "margins" with Kable & Company?

To all lovers of the holy and justly-revered traditions of the Methodist Episcopacy, the aspect of these unworthy dealings which will be the most distressing and revolting is presented by the statement emanating from the office of Harry Goldhurst, the Bishop's confidential adviser, to the effect that before going on a missionary tour to Africa, the Bishop left with Kable & Company his itinerary showing the dates of his arrival at various ports so that he

on the road in less than eight months!

Less than eight months have elapsed since the first Chevrolet Six was delivered into the hands of an owner—and already there are more than a million six-cylinder Chevrolets on the road! And the reasons for this overwhelming success are easy to understand.

Into a price field that had hitherto been occupied exclusively by four-cylinder cars—Chevrolet has introduced a six-cylinder car of amazing quality and value. Not only does it offer the smooth, quiet, velvety performance of a great six-cylinder valve-in-head motor—but, from every standpoint, it is a finer automobile than was ever before thought possible at such low prices! Its beautiful new bodies—which are available in a variety of colors—represent one of Fisher's greatest style triumphs. And its safety and handling ease are so outstanding that it's a sheer delight to sit at the wheel and drive. In fact, the new Chevrolet Six has completely changed every previous idea as to what the buyer of a low-priced car now has a right to expect for his money.

You owe it to yourself, as a careful buyer, to see and drive this car. For it gives you every advantage of a fine six-cylinder automobile—in the price range of the four and with economy of better than 20 miles to the gallon! Come in today!

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—In the town of Urbino, Italy, when it was under the control of Cesare Borgia, famous military commander as well as great statesman, a certain Messer Corvinus Trismegistus, arrant rogue, is flourishing as a fortune teller, charmer of spells, and dispenser of poisons to those who can afford to pay for them. To him comes in great secrecy the Lady Bianca de Floravanti, beautiful daughter of the rich and powerful lord of the Castle of San Leo, which is holding out against the power of even Cesare Borgia. In the act of entering, the girl is astounded by the appearance of what she takes for an apparition, but who turns out to be human as herself, and enters with her Bianca asks the sorcerer for an elixir which will compel love and mentions the name of the man she desires to conquer, Lorenzo Castrocara, condottiero serving under Cesare Borgia. Corvinus, for a large sum of money, gives her a potion, with directions, and the girl departs. When she leaves, the apparition appears before Corvinus. He is the much dreaded Cesare himself. Borgia learns from Corvinus that he has a substance which he declares will restore the dead to life. He then accuses the man of spreading the report that the Sultan Djem had been destroyed by the Holy Father through a subtle poison which Corvinus had supplied. Corvinus denies it, but admits he has a deadly poison which will lie dormant in the body for 30 days and at the end of that time result in the death of the person to whom it has been administered. Cesare forces him to drink it, and restore himself to life. The sorcerer secures an emetic and saves himself.

"Opportunity has served me none too well," she explained, almost in self-defense. "Indeed, circumstance is all against me. My father is the castellan of St. Leo, devoted to Duke Guidobaldo, wherefore it is natural that we should see but little of one who serves under the banner of the foe. And so I fear that he may go his way unless I have that which will bring him to me in despite of all."

Corvinus considered the matter silently awhile, then sighed. "I see great difficulties to be overcome," said the wily mage.

"But you can help me to overcome them?"

"His gleaming eyes considered her. 'It will be costly,' he said.

"What's that to me? Do you think I'll count the cost in such a matter?"

The wizard drew back, frowned, and wrapped himself in great dignity.

"Understand me," said he with some asperity. "This is no shop where things are bought and sold. My knowledge and my magic are at the service of all humanity. These I do not sell. I bestow them freely and without fee upon all who need them. But if I give so much, so very much, it cannot be expected that I should give more. The drugs I have assembled from all corners of the earth are often of great price. That price it is yours to bear, since the medicine is for your service."

"You have such medicine, then?"

she cried, her hands clasping in sudden increase of hopefulness.

He nodded assent.

"Love philtres are common things enough, and easy of preparation in the main. Any rustic hag who deals in witchcraft and preys on fools can brew one."

The contempt of his tone was withering.

"But for your affair, where great obstacles must be surmounted, or ever the affinities can be made to respond, a drug of unusual power is needed. Such a drug I have—though little of it, for in all the world there is none more difficult to obtain. Its chief component is an extract from the brain of a rare bird—avis rarissima—of Africa."

With feverish fingers she plucked a heavy purse from her girdle and splashed it upon the table. It fell against the grinning skull, and thus cheek by jowl with each other lay Life's two masters—Death and Gold.

"Fifty ducats!" she panted in her excitement. "Will that suffice?"

"Perhaps," said he, entirely disdainful. "Should it fall something short, I will myself add what may be lacking." And with contemptuous fingers, eloquent of his scorn of mere profit, he pushed the purse aside, a thing of no account in this transaction.

She began to protest that more should be forthcoming. But he nobly overrode her protestations. He rose, revealing his broad, black girdle that clasped his scarlet robe about his waist, all figured with the signs of the zodiac wrought in gold. He stepped to the shelves and took from one of them a bronze casket of some size. With this he returned to the table, set it down, opened it, and drew forth a tiny phial, a slender little tube of glass that was plugged and sealed.

It contained no more than a thread of deep amber fluid—a dozen drops at most. He held it up so that it gleamed golden in the light.

"This," he said, "is my elixirium aureum, my golden elixir, a rare and very subtle potion, sufficient for your need." Abruptly he proffered it to her.

With a little cry of gratitude and joy she held out avid hands to take the phial. But as her fingers were about to close upon it, he snatched it back, and raised a hand impressively to restrain her.

"Attend to me," he bade her, his glittering eye regarding her intently. "To this golden elixir you shall add two drops of your own blood, neither more nor less; then contrive that Messer Lorenzo drink it in his wine. But all must be done while the moon is waxing; and, in a measure, as the moon continues to grow, so will his passion mount and abide in him. And before that same moon shall have begun to wane that Lorenzo Castrocara will come to you, though the whole world lie between you, and he will be your utter and absolute slave. The present is a propitious time. Go, and be you happy."

She took the phial, which he now relinquished and broke into thanks. But imperiously by a wave of the hand and a forbidding look he stemmed her gratitude. He smote a little gong that stood by.

There was the sound of the opening door. The curtains parted with a clash, and the white-robed Nubian appeared, saluted on the threshold, waiting to reconduct her.

Madonna Bianca bowed to the great magician and departed over-awed by the majesty of his demeanor. She had passed out, and still the Nubian waited on the threshold—waited for the man he had admitted with her. But Corvinus, knowing naught of his slave's motive for lingering, bade him hastily become whereupon the curtains were drawn together again, and the door was closed.

Left alone, the magician flung off the great mantle of overawing dignity, descended from the lofty indifference to gain, natural enough in one who is master of the ages, and became humanly interested in the purse which Madonna Bianca had left him. Drawing wide the mouth of it, he emptied the golden contents into the vast page of his book of magic. He spread the glittering mass, and fingered it affectionately, chuckling in his red beard, and then quite suddenly his chuckle was echoed by a laugh, short, abrupt, contemptuous and sinister.

With a startled gasp Corvinus looked up, his hands spreading to cover and protect the gold, his eyes dilating with a sudden fear, a fear that swelled at what he saw. Before him, in mid-chamber, stood a tall figure all in black—black cloak, black cap and black face, out of which two gleaming eyes considered him.

Trembling in every fiber, white of cheek, his mouth and eyes agape, a prey to a terror greater far than any it had ever been his lot to inspire in others, the wizard stared at the dread phantom, and assumed—not unnaturally it must be confessed—that here was Satan to claim his own at last.

There came a pause. Corvinus attempted to speak, to challenge the apparition. But courage failed him; terror struck him dumb.

Presently the figure advanced, silent-footed, menacing; and the wizard's knees were loosened under him. He sank gibbering into his high-backed chair, and waited for death, with bell to follow. At least, you see, he knew what he deserved.

The apparition halted at last, before the table, within arm's length of Corvinus, and a voice came to break the awful spell, a voice infinitely mocking yet unquestionably, reassuringly human.

"Greetings, Thrice-Mage!" it said. It took Corvinus some moments to realize that his visitor was mortal, after all, and some further moments to recover some semblance of self-possession. An incontinent chagrin mingling with the remains of his fears, he spoke at last.

"Who art thou?" he cried, the voice which he would fain have rendered bold, high-pitched and quavering.

The cloak opened, displaying a graceful, well-knit figure in sable velvet that was wrought with golden arabesques. From a girdle studded with fiery rubies hung a long and heavy dagger, whose hilt and scabbard were of richly chased gold. On the backs of the black velvet gloves diamonds hung and sparkled like drops of water, to complete the somber splendor of the man's attire. One of the hands was raised to pluck away the vizor and disclose the youthful, aquiline and very noble countenance of Cesare Borgia, duke of Valentinois and Romagna.

Corvinus recognized him on the instant, and recognizing him was far from sure that things would have been worse had his visitor been the devil, as he had at first supposed. "My lord!" he cried, profoundly amazed, profoundly uneasy. And, thinking aloud in his consternation, he added the question, foolish in a master of all secrets: "How came you in?"

"I, too, know something of magic," said the tawny-headed young duke, and there was mockery in his voice and in the smile he bent upon the wizard. He did not think it necessary to explain that all the magic he had employed had been to enter as if in attendance upon Madonna Bianca de Floravanti, and then to slip silently behind the black arras with which, to serve his purpose of deception, Messer Corvinus hung his walls.

But the magician was not duped. Who makes the image does not worship it. The truth—the precise truth—of magic was known undoubtedly to Corvinus, and it therefore follows that he did not for a moment suppose that the means by which the duke had gained admittance had been other than perfectly natural ones. Anon the Nubian should be keenly questioned, and, if necessary, as keenly whipped. Meanwhile the duke himself must claim attention, and Corvinus—knowing himself a rogue—was far from easy.

But if he was not easy, at least he was master of an inexhaustible store of impudence, and upon this he made now a heavy draft. To cover his momentary discomfiture, he smiled now as inscrutably as the duke. Quickly he thrust the gold back into the purse, never heeding a coin that fell and rolled away along the floor. He tossed the purse aside, and, retaining his seat what time his highness remained standing, he combed his long, bifurcated beard.

"Betwixt your magic and mine, Magnificent, there is some difference," he said, with sly suggestion.

"I should not be here else," replied the duke; and abruptly he proceeded to the matter that had brought him. "It is said you have found an elixir that restores the dead to life."

"It is rightly said, my lord," replied the wizard with assurance. He was becoming master of himself again.

"You have tested it?" quoth Cesare.

"In Myrrus, three years ago, I restored life to a man who had been dead two days. He is still living, and will testify."

"Your word suffices me," said the duke; and the irony was so sly that Corvinus was left wondering whether irony there had been. "At need, no doubt, you would make proof of it upon yourself?"

Corvinus turned cold from head to foot, yet answered boldly of very necessity:

"At needs, I would."

Valentinois sighed as one who is content, and Corvinus took heart again.

"You have this elixir at hand?"

"Enough to restore life to one man—just that and no more. It is a rare and very precious liquor, and very costly, as you may perceive,

(To Be Continued.)

Magnificent." "Derived, no doubt, from the brain of some rare bird in Africa," the duke mocked him. "By not so much as a flicker of the eyelid did Corvinus acknowledge the hit. "Not so, Magnificent," he replied.

Corvinus Turned Cold From Head to Foot.

Imperturbably. "It was derived from—"

"No matter!" said the duke. "Let me have it!"

The magician rose, turned to his shelves, and sought there awhile. Presently he came back with a phial containing a blood-red liquid. "It is here," he said, and he held the slender vessel to the light, so that it glowed like a ruby.

"Force apart the teeth of the dead man and pour this draft down his throat. Within an hour he will revive, provided the body has first been warmed before a fire."

Valentinois took the phial slowly in his gloved fingers. He considered it, his countenance very thoughtful.

"It cannot fail to act? he questioned.

"It cannot fail, Magnificent," replied the sage.

"No matter how the man may have died?"

SPELLS OF BACKACHE

"I HAVE used Cardui at intervals for sixteen years, when I suffered from weakness, and it always helped me," says Mrs. J. W. Jimright, R. F. D. 2, Troy, Ala. "Mostly I was afflicted with bad spells of backache. At times I felt as if my back would break. I would drag one foot after the other, in a helpless sort of a way, and once I got down in bed. My husband urged me to take Cardui, and I soon found what a fine medicine it really was. "When my second child was little, I was in very bad health. I did not pick up as I should have. I was weak and sickly. I do not believe that I would have come through, but for Cardui."

WHO FAILED IN REGARD TO L. E. THRASH?

The verdict of the coroner's jury was that L. E. Thrash took his own life; why he did it is one of the inexplicable things that will remain unknown this side of the Judgment.

It may be safely conjectured that he was in the slough of despond and that he believed the tide was against him, and that he was doomed for the rocks.

No doubt he had magnified some minor business reverse or disappointment into a mountain of failure.

In thinking of his sad and ever to be deplored end, the inquiry comes from the invisible somewhere, "Did you do your duty towards Mr. Thrash; did you stop to speak a few encouraging words to him and did you ever seek to let him know that you wanted to be his friend?" He no doubt walked about the streets and sat in his office revolving over in his mind the imaginary darkened clouds; no doubt he suffered himself to believe that he was about the only man that was sorely beset. Had some kind friend dropped in on him and talked with him about life's affairs, he would have soon realized that every man has at times his burden, and this of itself would have gone a long way towards making him to see the glorious sunshine and the beauty, glory and grandeur of this old world. His thoughts then would have left mundane things and wended their way to the gates of Paradise where an Angel would have lifted his burden and told him to go hence for all mankind wanted to be his friend and besides friends, he had others whose hearts were bound to him by ties which even Angels could not sever or loosen.

We are a busy people. Life moves on with an onward sweep. We are so often so engrossed with what concerns us as individuals, that we neglect the finer and sweeter things that exist in luxurious abundance along life's highway. When we lift a burden from a fellow soul, a tender hand writes a line in that record which is in the courts of the Celestial City whose maker and builder is God.

When we by word or kindly deed connect the golden cord, which for the time being is severed, that binds every heart to that pathos, sympathy and love whence all good comes, we render a service that is again written by fingers that glow in splendor at the foot of the Throne. Maybe if some of us had sought Mr. Thrash more and had endeavored to make him know that our hearts beat in unison with his, the imagined burden would have rolled away like a huge stone down the mountain side.

"What gem hath dropp'd and sparkles o'er his chain?
The Tear most sacred, shed for others' pain
That starts at once—bright—pure—from Pity's mine, Already polish'd by the Hand Divine".

All of us have our cares and burdens; sometimes they pile up in our imagination until we faint under the load. Then some interested neighbor or friend comes along and we are soon made to know that he is likewise burdened, and then it is that we readily see that fate is not unkind to us. Then it is that we hear echoing through the ages something like this, "Blessed is he that helps a weakened brother bear his burden; he does that which brings joy to his Maker".

Shall we not think of the lesson that comes to us through the tragic ending of the life of L. E. Thrash?

It is so easy to say the nice thing—"words are vehicles of action"; yes and of the index of character, and they can be used to mirror the sublime happiness of heaven before our eyes every day.

"Words timely spoken are like pictures of gold in apples of silver".

"All about you are discouraged people. Many a man showing a brave front to the world, is only practicing that holy hypocrisy which Christ speaks of when He tells men to anoint their heads and appear not unto men to fast. They are bearing heavy loads bravely, but they need a word of encouragement."

THE IMPEACHMENT TRIAL OF GEN. KNOX

The writer of these lines is glad that it is not his responsibility to pass on the impeachment proceedings now taking place in the Mississippi house of representatives against Attorney General Rush Knox. Personally, we like the Attorney General. It is a most serious thing to say that a man is unworthy to hold office.

The committee that conducted the investigation and that preferred the impeachment charges as a result of said investigation, we feel sure, did what it conscientiously believed to be right. We know personally several members of the committee. The chairman, Hon. Dan McGehee, we believe, is an honest, clear headed man. One of the committeemen, J. H. Parrish, resides in Oakland, and a more upright or conscientious man cannot be found. This committee was named by Speaker Bailey when the legislature was organized, and the Speaker has not been accused of naming a majority of any committee who are "Bilbo men".

To say the least of it, the Attorney General has allowed himself placed in an unenviable position. But the law under which he operates furnishes the background for whatever he may have done, hence in our judgment a blundering legislative act is largely responsible for what Gen. Knox is charged with.

The committee brought in a supplemental report Wednesday in which it boldly declared that the fact that Capt. Cecil Inman was not mentioned in the charges against Knox did not mean that Inman was not thought to be guilty. We have heard many comments on the failure of the committee to mention its position as to the ex-chairman of the tax commission. We cannot see how Knox can be guilty and Inman innocent, however, it is difficult to establish conspiracy charges.

But the impeachment charges aside. Regardless of the outcome of the trial of Gen. Knox, the legislature should give attention at once to changing the law under which the Attorney General operates. The fees should be cut and a clear line of designation of duties of the attorney general and the chairman of the tax commission should be defined.

The chairman of the tax commission has both judicial and executive powers. He has too much leeway. We urged this in 1924 when the war whoop went down the line to get the goat of the back tax collector, but The Sentinel stood alone; it was a vertiable John the Baptist crying in the wilderness of political scythe swatting.

It is probable that before these lines get to the public the house will have voted on the first charge against Gen. Knox which, if not sustained, most probably means that all other charges will be dropped.

IS THE BISHOP BEGINNING TO SEE AS OTHERS SEE?

The following from the talented editor of the Hattiesburg American suggests the query: "Is Bishop James Cannon, Jr., even now able to get a glimpse of himself as others see him?" The American is edited by the son of a Methodist minister and is himself a Methodist, he therefore cannot be accused of using his editorial columns for sectarian purposes:

"When Bishop James Cannon, Jr., was going up and down the land last fall in active support of the Hoover presidential candidacy, he claimed to do so merely as a private citizen and not as a dignitary of the Methodist Episcopal Church. However, as it inevitably occurs, this private citizen having achieved his eminence through his official connection with this denomination, it was indeed difficult for the average voter to disassociate him from the episcopal robes of office and to receive his remarks as those of a private citizen and no more.

"According to the news reports, it has likewise proved difficult for certain public officials to disassociate the private funds of the bishop from those of the church board over which he presides. Consequently, a congressional investigation is proposed to settle the question, in the course of which the Methodist Church will be embarrassed by having to defend itself against the charge of participating actively in political and legislative affairs.

"So it seems that Bishop Cannon sees himself now as an operator on the stock market, now an ardent reformer clothed in ecclesiastical authority, and then again a private citizen enjoying his fling in politics. Doubtless it is a great personal convenience; but, unfortunately, the public has a single-track mind and regardless of his role of the moment it continues to mention him and to address him by his ecclesiastical title and list his debits and credits to the one account."

THE "BIG BOYS" IN THE SADDLE.

But the crowd of "big boys" are in the saddle. They are organizing a world bank with a nominal capital of a hundred million; the Wabash railroad crowd are apparently about to effect a gigantic merger; the yeast and food crowd have gotten together in a tremendous combination; there's a billion dollar utilities get-together. And so it is going on down the line. You see it on every side. What does it all mean?

One student says if this keeps on, and in not a great while either, it must mean either socialism or cataclysm. This crowd is today more powerful than the government.—Jamison in His Washington Window Seat.

Adults—Contract Children's Diseases

Adults can, and do, contract many children's diseases. And, usually, they suffer from them much more than children do. For instance, many adults contract worms, an ailment usually associated with children. Sometimes they suffer intensely and take expensive medical treatments, without realizing that worms are the cause of their troubles. Yet, the symptoms are the same as in children, loss of appetite and weight, grinding the teeth and restless sleep, itching of the nose and anus, and abdominal pains. And, the same medicine that surely and harmlessly expels round and pin worms from children will do the same for adults—White's Cream Vermifuge, which you can get at CORNER DRUG STORE.

To The Citizens of Grenada:

The Winona Swimming Pool is about to close for this season, as the opening of the schools are only a few days off.

I want to express to my friends in Grenada my sincere thanks for their liberal patronage this summer. It has not only been profitable to me but a real pleasure as well to have you call on me. And I will miss seeing you during the coming fall and winter days.

I have done my utmost to make your visits to me a pleasure and I hope you have enjoyed them as much as I have. I hope you will be ready to come to see me at the "Swimming Pool" again at the opening and during next season. In the meantime I will be thinking of you and wishing you a mighty pleasant and profitable fall and winter.

Sincerely,

D. L. WEBSTER, Prop.

Proving

what thousands already know . . . that here is America's finest medium-priced automobile

The information in the accompanying chart was compiled by comparing the Oakland All-American with twenty other medium-priced cars, thirteen of them higher than Oakland in price. It proves to everyone what thousands of Oakland owners already know—that today's Oakland All-American is America's finest medium-priced automobile.

Only a few comparisons are given here. There are scores more which we will be glad to show you. Come in to see them. And while you are here, drive today's Oakland All-American Six.

What these features mean to you

Large piston displacement is needed to develop high power at moderate engine speed. Moderate engine speed is an important factor in the life of a car.

No name in automobile coach building means so much as Fisher. Fisher bodies are famous for style, luxury and roominess. In addition, they hold such advantages as sturdy composite hardwood and steel construction, VV windshield, side cowl ventilation and adjustable drivers' seats.

Reasonably long wheelbase gives greater riding ease and road balance. Also permits use of longer, smarter, roomier bodies. At the same time, a small turning circle is essential to handling ease.

Prices, $1145 to $1375, f. o. b. Pontiac, Mich., plus delivery charges. Spring covers and Lovjoy Shock Absorbers included in list prices. Bumpers and rear fender guards extra. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Compliments Cousin.

Mrs. Homer Williams entertained five tables of players at bridge last Friday afternoon in honor of her cousin, Miss Elizabeth Daniels, of Jackson.

After the guests had arrived refreshing coca-colas were served and at the close of the afternoon, Mrs. Williams was assisted in serving a delicious ice and sand-wich by Misses Elizabeth and Gloria Williams.

Miss Margaret Crenshaw won high score prize, a box of French note paper, consolation, a novelty powder box, was cut by Miss Margaret Trusty. The lovely honoree was presented a pretty string of beads and Misses Ida Keen Buck and Mary Leona Morris, two other attractive visitors, were also given strings of beads. Low score prize was a compact.

The guest list included: Misses Thelma Jackson, Mary Ida Sharp, Agnes Trusty, Bessie Phelan Sharp, Mary Ann and Margaret Crenshaw, Dit Perry, Ida Keen Buck, Blue Horton, Bay Grant, Isabel Bailey, Adelaide Horton, Margaret Trusty, Mary Leona Morris, Mary Upshaw Jones, Mar-guarite Honeycutt, Mary Ross and Virginia Smith.

Mrs. Williams, was dressed for the occasion in a yellow flat crepe sport dress while the honoree was becomingly gowned in orchid georgette.

Mrs. Harrison Hostess.

Mrs. Durwood Harrison was the hostess Wednesday morning at a lovely bridge party given in honor of her three house guests, Misses Serena Hopper and Eula Lackey, of Forest, and Lovey Moore, of Duck Hill.

Mrs. Harrison's apartment at the Planters Hotel was the scene of the affair.

When the guests had arrived a pretty and unique salad course with refreshing fruit punch was served. Mints were enjoyed during the games.

At the conclusion of the games Mrs. W. A. McCool was fortunate in holding high score and received a double deck of cards in modernistic design. Misses Hopper and Lackey were each presented a set of bridge table markers and pencils, and Miss Moore was given a score pad.

Those making up the four tables of players were, besides the honorees: Mrs. George Long, Mrs. Jack Roane, Mrs. W. A. McCool, Mrs. George Garner, Mrs. S. H. Garner, Mrs. J. N. Estes, Mrs. Dewey Harrison, Mrs. Knox Pierce, Mrs. Spivey Kent and Misses Daisy Leigh Roane, Kathryn Todd, Rebecca Stokes and Catherine Lufkin. Miss Lena Smith assisted Mrs. Harrison in entertaining her guests.

Miss Coffman Hostess.

The home of Miss Lida Coffman was the scene of a lovely party Tuesday morning when she entertained at bridge for Miss Margaret Trusty and her guest, Miss Leona Morris, of Little Rock.

The room, thrown open to the guests had been artistically decorated with garden flowers.

After an interesting session at the card table, Miss Bessie May Finney, whose score was highest, received a dainty handkerchief as a reward for her skill. Miss Morris was presented an attractive ring.

Miss Coffman served refreshing sherbet and sandwiches to the following guests: Misses Isabel Bailey, Bay Grant, Blue Horton, Adelaide Horton, Dit Perry, Margaret Connell, Mary Elizabeth McNeill, Agnes Trusty, Bessie Phelan Sharp, Dorothy Aiken, Virginia Smith, Thelma Jackson, Virginia Lee Horton, Bessie May Finney, Marguerite Honeycutt, Mary Upshaw Jones and Chloe Lufkin.

Celebrates 12th Birthday.

Miss Nina Grace Cunningham celebrated her twelfth birthday Monday afternoon with an enjoyable picture show party.

She was lovingly remembered by her friends with many pretty and useful gifts.

After the show the party went by the Eclipse for refreshments.

Those sharing the pleasures of the afternoon with the young hostess were: Misses Eleanor Lickfold, Lucy Webb Sharp, Rachel Todd, Martha Hoffa, Jamah Provine, Marjorie Peal, Elizabeth Patterson, Annie Anderson, Adelaide McCaslin and Alice Lee Triplett.

Miss Wilson Has Dance.

Miss Cora Lee Wilson entertained most delightfully Tuesday night at the Eclipse with a dance in honor of her attractive guest, Miss Margaret Connell, of Montgomery, Ala.

A number of the young people were privileged to share the evening's pleasure, with the hostess and honoree. During the evening punch was served.

Miss Wilson was becomingly dressed in a lavender organdy evening dress. Miss Connell was lovely in green organdy.

BUFFALO, NEW YORK MAN GROWS EXCITED OVER RATTLESNAKE

On Tuesday afternoon Mr. R. H. Ross, of Buffalo, N. Y., dropped into The Sentinel office and, after making himself known, asked if the writer did not want to see a partially alive rattlesnake which he said he had wounded on the highway between here and Oxford, evidently somewhere in the Oxberry community. Mr. Ross was more than thrilled over his conquest. He manifested the exuberance of a mere boy. He did not know that rattlesnakes are common in this section, nevertheless their numbers are thousands less than some few years ago. He used a small stick about 15 inches in length in braining the snake which measured some twenty inches or more long. He was clever in giving the details of the encounter, and stated that he intended to skin the reptile and send the skin to his wife.

Mr. Ross is the traveling representative for Mississippi, Alabama and Tennessee for the Cattaraugus Cutlery Co. of Little Valley, N. Y. He has just come into his new territory and is making his first trip into Mississippi. He stated that Grenada's fame as a beautiful, home-loving town had reached him before he left Buffalo. He was urged to make his headquarters here, and indicated that it was probable that he might do so. He expressed himself as being delighted with the cordial greetings and superabundance of good fellowship of the people of the South, and stated that that was one of the main reasons why he wanted southern territory.

When Mr. Ross returns to Buffalo, he will outtell of his first rattlesnake experience, and The Sentinel will state for him now that much latitude is allowed by Mississippians to fishermen and slayers of poisonous snakes. Nothing in the wide, wide world good can be said for snakes.

BIG CREEK, ROUTE 2 ITEMS

The nice rain we got yesterday was appreciated by everyone.

Miss Martha Rounsaville had as her guest last week Miss Ruby Gray, of Gore Springs.

Mr. Ralph Crenshaw has returned home from Arkansas where he spent a few weeks.

Don't forget the first week in September our meeting at Shiloh begins. Everyone invited. Come! Come to Sunday School Sunday a. m. at 10 o'clock. Everyone be there and on time.

Health Hint

Many persons complain of lack of appetite on arising. This is often due to sluggish digestion from the night before. Trip for breakfast helps to overcome this condition. A little fresh air and exercise before eating are some hints.

Unintentional Suicide

Many people are slowly poisoning themselves just as surely as if they drank iodine every morning for breakfast. They are daily absorbing the toxins, or poisons, created by accumulated waste matter in their digestive systems. Sooner or later disease will conquer their weakened bodies.

If you have dizzy spells, headaches, coated tongue, bad breath, indigestion, no appetite, bilious attacks or pains in the back and limbs, you are probably suffering from self poisoning caused by constipation. The surest and pleasantest relief for this condition is Herbine, the vegetable cathartic which acts in the natural way. Get a bottle today from

COUNTY SCHOOL NEWS

By LAFAYETTE ATKINSON Superintendent of Education

According to an announcement of the trustees and the principal, A. Y. McBride, of the Holcomb consolidated school, the opening of the 1929-1930 session will be on Monday, September 2, at 9 o'clock.

A splendid corps of trained and qualified teachers has been employed to instruct the pupils of the district. A faculty of eleven teachers has been secured to carry on the work of the school with the assistance of seven truck drivers. Plans and arrangements have been made to put the buildings, grounds and equipment in the best possible shape for the coming session in order to render the very best service to the children. A new department is being added to the buildings for the use of the home science pupils.

It is expected by the authorities that the school will open with the largest attendance in its history. There will be more children to enter school on the first day than were in school last session. It is urged by the officials that all pupils enroll the first day of the school. It is very necessary to the success of the children to be on hand at the beginning to make the proper entrance and get lined up for the year's work. Patrons are requested to attend the opening and have the children ready for work on the opening date.

In accordance with the announcement of the trustees and principal, O. D. Spratin, of the Gore Springs school the opening exercises will be held in the auditorium on August 30, at 10 o'clock a. m.

Patrons of the school are requested to be present and have all the children of the community in readiness for the class work which will begin immediately after the opening of the school. It is very important that all children be on hand at the beginning of the session to get their proper assignment for books. The success of the pupils will depend largely on the beginning made in the school. A late start will retard the work of the pupil.

The school authorities employ

Lesson for August 18

THE RETURN FROM CAPTIVITY

LESSON TEXT—Jeremiah 29:10-14; Ezra 1:1-6; Ps. 137:1-6.

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Happy Home Coming.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Second Chance.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Making a Fresh Start.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Historic Significance of the Return.

I. The Return Predicted (Jer. 29:10-14).

False prophets were flourishing in Babylon telling the people that they would speedily be restored to their own land. To counteract this the Lord moved Jeremiah to send a letter to the captives in Babylon (vv. 8, 9). In this letter he advised them to settle down and quietly pursue their regular callings of life, and not to be led astray by the false prophets (vv. 6, 7).

1. The length of the captivity (v. 10).

Their coming back was to be "after seventy years." From Daniel 9:2 it is clear that seventy years means a definite time. It dates from the time when the first company, among which Daniel was found, was taken captive.

2. Recovered by God (vv. 10-14). God's purpose in the captivity was to cure them of their idolatrous practices. He assured them that when His purpose was accomplished He would visit them and convince them of His good purpose toward them.

II. The Predicted Captivity Fulfilled (Ezra. 1:1-6).

1. The Proclamation of Cyrus (vv. 1-4).

(1) This was not by accident, but that the word of the Lord might be fulfilled (v. 1). What God has promised He will do.

(2) By divine initiation (v. 1).

"The Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus." How this was done we do not know. Possibly Daniel brought to the attention of the prophecy of Isaiah and Jeremiah (Isa. 44:28; Jer. 25:12).

(3) The content of the king's proclamation (vv. 2-4).

(a) "The Lord God of heaven hath charged me to build Him a house in Jerusalem" (v. 2). This makes clear that he had some impression of God's hand upon him.

(b) Appeal to Jewish patriotism (v. 3).

He invokes upon such as possess the national religious feeling, the blessing of God, and commands them to go and build the house of the Lord God.

(c) To lend assistance (v. 4).

Many of the Jews were established in business and therefore were not free to go. Many, no doubt, had lost their national spirit and were not anxious to go. All such were to lend friendly assistance with silver, gold and beasts.

2. The response to Cyrus' proclamation (vv. 5, 6).

The chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin and the priests and Levites presented themselves as willing to go. The company which returned was largely made up of representatives of Judah and Benjamin.

3. The royal favor (vv. 7-11).

Cyrus returned 5,400 vessels of the house of the Lord which Nebuchadnezzar had brought forth out of Jerusalem and put into the house of his gods. This was a great encouragement to every loyal Jew whose heart had been grieved over the profanation of these sacred vessels.

III. The Gladness and Rejoicing of the Returning Exiles (Ps. 126:1-6).

1. The proclamation of Cyrus as a dream (v. 1).

They recognized that their going back was through the favor of the Lord.

2. Their laughter and singing (vv. 2, 3).

They not only recognized the favor of the Lord upon them, but testified thereof in the hearing of the heathen round about them.

3. Their prayer for prosperity in the land (v. 4).

They were not only going back with the consciousness of the good hand of the Lord upon them, but were trusting Him for the fruitfulness of the land.

4. Sowing in tears (vv. 5, 6).

The seeds which they were to sow on the land were so precious that they seemed to have hesitated as to sowing, and yet they recognized that joy would follow their sorrow when they should bring in the sheaves of the harvest.

six teachers to carry on the work of the school in the best possible way. Four new teachers have been added to assist the principal who has been serving the community faithfully for the past five years with the assistance of Mrs. Spratin in the primary department. With these two faithful and loyal workers and the assistance of the four well trained and qualified workers in the elementary and junior departments it is predicted that the school will have the most successful year in its history.

The trustees have been planning for some time to give to the children of the district better means of transportation. In the past wagons have been used for carrying the children in the main. But at the opening of this session the school will have four well equipped motor vehicles with comfortable and commodious bodies for the delivery of the children to the school.

building. This is a step forward by the board for better facilities for the patrons of the district. With the improvements in the school, the employment of new and well qualified teachers and the use of better equipment for transportation it seems that the school will have a better school year.

The Wolfe-Hardy school located at Hardy, will begin work on the 2nd of September at 8:30 a. m. according to announcement of the authorities of that school. Patrons are invited to be present at the opening and bring the children so that proper classifications can be made and books assigned.

The trustees have been busy making preparations to take care of the growth of the school and provide better equipment for the transportation of the children of the district, who live out from the school. Two new well equipped trucks will be used in transporting the children to the school building.

Miss Myrtle Jones, who has been a teacher in the school for the past two sessions, will be at the head of the school during the coming session. Miss Jones has done good work in her department and it is assured that the school will be in good hands, and a splendid school year is awaiting the pupils of the district.

The patrons of the Elliott, Tie Plant and Fair Ground school district are advised that the opening of the city schools will be on September 9th. All patrons will make the proper preparation to enroll their pupils in accordance with the plans of the above school. Announcements will follow later. It is urged that all children enroll on the first day of the school in order to get the proper classification and secure the correct assignment of books for the coming session. Children who make late entrance have handicaps in getting a good start for their year's work.

might receive news by cable of the status of the stock market, thus enabling him to pause long enough in his ministrations for the salvation of the benighted Africans to study the condition of the stock market, select the stocks he desired and wire in to Cable & Company his waging orders. Shades of Francis Asbury and Walter Lambuth, sainted missionary Bishops of our church, look down in pity on us!

And what are we going to do about it?

Will the College of Bishops be content to sit without protest with this member of their body while considering the sacred and holy things of the church? Will the presiding elders encourage or even willingly allow the district conferences over which they preside to pass resolutions similar to that passed at Junaluska by the Methodist Board of Temperance and Social Service? Will there stand forth among the Methodist preachers a mighty Savonarola to hurl irresistible philippics against rambling in the high places of the church? Will the laymen of the church—thousands, tens of thousands, nay, hundreds of thousands—who have made it a fixed and invariable principle to give a quick response for everything they acquire—be willing without violent protest to let our great church appear as sanctioning stock and cotton speculations which even in their best form have brought our country to the verge of a disaster?

One year AGE... 81,065 Sales BUSINESS... All-time record REMARKS... for first-year cars

De Soto Six—one year old—August 4, 1929. During the past twelve months, 81,065 De Soto Sixes were sold—breaking all records for a first-year car in the entire history of the industry.

It is not surprising that a car so handsome, so comfortable and responsive—and so safe and easy to drive as De Soto Six—should find a ready market. But it is significant that even such a car as this should set a new sales record for the industry in the first year of its existence.

This unprecedented public acceptance is your assurance that no matter what model you may choose for your own, you will possess a car whose distinction and quality will afford lasting pride and satisfaction—such as no other car at its price can offer.

Test De Soto Six in any way that you desire—drive it yourself. A demonstration will enable you to confirm for yourself the popular judgment that has made De Soto Six a record-breaker in its first year.

SOME OF METHODIST LAYMEN OF GRENADA THINK CANNON SHOULD BE TRIED

when it is little less than moral cowardice for them to refuse, or to refrain from making public pronouncement as to their position on questions raised. Holy Writ has pronounced condemnation upon those who hide their light under a bushel.

Few indeed there be of serious minded, painstaking, God-fearing men who are not willing to meet responsibility that is thrust upon them, or who will not assert their views on questions, or a question, that a vast multitude believes touches the very heart life of men and women and the very main springs of public conscience. In our judgment, this hour, fraught as it is with grave consequences to the great Methodist church, of which we are humble members, and carrying as it does a beguiling voice that cannot, as we see it, but stifle in some measure the faithful wailing of those who cling to that consoling message of peace on earth and good will towards men, is here, and should be met like men who profess allegiance to that faith which grows brightest in the darkest hours, and which has served as a helmet to multiplied millions for the past two thousand years.

We cannot afford to sit with folded hands while one of the Bishops of the Methodist church strays into fields which we have been taught for these years are dangerous and utterly out of harmony with the will of God. Reference is had to Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

Shall it be said of us that duty called and we closed our ears? or that we were tested, and that the burning message which was written on the walls for Belshazzar at his Bacchanalian feast was pronounced upon us—"Weighed in the balance and found wanting"? Shall we meet the test as John Wesley met all tests? Shall we follow the example of our fathers and forefathers who never ducked an issue, and who thought for themselves and would not be blindly bound by precedent or the edicts of self-constituted leaders or those elevated by them to high place? This is no time for letting "George do it."

Both the religious and secular press have carried items many times during the past year, and particularly during the past few weeks, of acts by Bishop Cannon, Jr., that are, in our judgment, discreditable to him and a most serious reflection, not only upon the M. E. Church, South, but upon the moral and religious standards of the membership of the church.

With the acts of James Cannon, Jr., we have naught to do, but the acts of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., concern the Christian world and particularly one of the great branches of the Christian churches. We are told that the Bishop has not only been up to his ears in political battles but that he speculated in flour during the World War, while the great body of people were being limited in the flour they used, and made more than one thousand dollars thereby. The Bishop admitted speculating in stocks and bonds and revelations as to his connection with a New York bucket shop now in the toils of the law are shocking to those who think circumspectly of allurement of the flesh and the sordid things of the flesh.

Southern Methodism would not today be quivering because of what Bishop Cannon has done had he followed the injunction of Bishop Hendrix, now gone to his reward, in admonishing a class of young preachers who were being admitted to full connection at an Alabama conference. Bishop Hendrix said to these young men: "But when you go into the homes of the members of your flock, it is not necessary to talk politics, either senatorial or prohibitory; nor is it necessary to discuss the boll weevil. Confine your work within the sphere of the church. Carry the message of Christ into the homes of your people and you will have done well."

Unfortunately, Bishop Cannon does not entertain the same view of the stock market that the distinguished William Allen White, of Emporia, Kansas, does. Mr. White said to his fellow-townsmen recently: "If your son is playing the market, take an elm club to him. If your clerk is pouring his savings into the Wall Street rat hole, look for another clerk." Yet we are humiliated by having Bishop Cannon tell the world that he has been doing this very thing for thirty or forty years.

Never were there so many heretofore regarded as honorable, worthy men in banks, or men who have heretofore been otherwise entrusted with money belonging to others, who have misused funds in their care, and in nearly every case the first act was that of borrowing without the consent of those borrowed from. If a Bishop is so august that he can pervert church funds, even for a while, is it not perfectly natural for the membership to ask if other Bishops have not done likewise?

The man who acts the superman with trust funds, sets a precedent that is bad for the youth and that may cause the downfall of many well intentioned men. "If a bishop can do this sort of a thing then why not I?" is a perfectly natural inquiry by the less thoughtful.

A very learned man, and one high in the councils of the Methodist church, said only recently: "When I entered the ministry I saw that the Church, in its Church capacity, had no business with political matters. No authority has been conferred on any of our church organizations to take political action. We are organized and meet for wholly different purposes, and when we enter the political field we are going outside our sphere, and we are narrowing our appeal to the very people we need to bring under the influence of the Gospel, and to enlist in the work of the Church. Our commission charges us with a message to all men of every opinion." It is unfortunate for the Methodist church and the cause of the Master that Bishop Cannon has not learned the lesson that this great leader learned in the very beginning of his ministry.

The church is of God. It is established by Him. It is the Ark of refuge and safety to an erring world. It comes in the hours of sorrow, gloom and distress and soothes the troubled brow and pours the oil of joy on the bewildered soul. The church will ever be all right; its leaders may go astray; they may go after false gods and may undertake to dignify things which will bewilder the trusting soul, yet the pillar of fire by night and the pillar of cloud by day that Moses followed in the wilderness will ever be there for those who stick to the faith.

In some respects a man set apart for the ministry and who makes pure and undefiled religion his guide, occupies a place in our mind quite akin to that of womanhood. Ministers are expected to live in an atmosphere above the ordinary. They are not expected to become so entangled with the issues and vexing problems of the world that they will not be able to give that comfort and disinterested advice to the members of their flock that all men so frequently need.

We fully appreciate the embarrassment that might come to the ministry of the church in assisting their views about this matter. We can readily see how it would be possible for a bishop to visit his displeasure on those ministers who express themselves as to what they regard as his wrong doing and the necessity of early action by the church to test the accuracy or inaccuracy of the charges against him. We feel that we can state that many of the ministry have been heard to say that they regret beyond measure what Bishop Cannon has done and that they are fearful of great harm to the church and to the cause of the Christian religion.

Realizing the embarrassing position that confronts the ministry, and the need of some aggressive action by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at an early day in order that the guilt or innocence of Bishop Cannon may be determined, and that the atmosphere may be cleared for united marching in the cause of Zion, we think that it is the imperative duty of the laymen and laywomen of Southern Methodism, who are not fettered by what a Bishop might do and whose places of labor are not in a bishop's hands, to assert themselves and to demand a speedy trial for Bishop Cannon.

Premises considered, it is therefore resolved by a meeting of laymen of the M. E. Church, South, Grenada, Mississippi, that we urge that Bishop James Cannon, Jr., be arraigned before some board or tribunal as suggested above and that with the least possible delay, and that the matters involved be thoroughly gone into, and if the allegations which are being broadcast against the Bishop are found to be true, that suitable and proper discipline be visited upon him to the end that a warning may be given others like-minded and that the world may know that the Southern Methodist Church still stands for purity in thought, circumspection of action and for those fundamental truths and principles which the wayfarer finds in the Bible and upon which the life of John Wesley was directed when by his self-abnegation and sacrifice he laid the foundation for the great things which have been accomplished by the Methodist church.

Resolved further, that if there were ever a time, in our judgment, when the laymen of the Methodist church should make their influence felt that time is now. Particularly is this true for the reason that personal reasons, and lest they be charged with infidelity to their official superiors, serve to make the ministry of the church more than careful about asserting themselves. Nevertheless, we believe that the doctrine we are seeking to set forth, meets the most cordial approval of the vast majority of the clergy of the Methodist church.

The pastor of the Methodist church in Grenada, Rev. J. H. Holder, issued a call for the official board of the Methodist church to meet Thursday morning, Aug. 15, at 10 o'clock, to consider as he announced, the resolutions passed at a meeting Sunday afternoon by some of the laymen of the church. The meeting assembled but all the official board were not present. Dr. R. A. Clanton, by virtue of his position as president of the board of stewards, presided. Mr. Holder made a brief statement of why he had called the meeting in which the good man seemed to think that he had been ignored and that, in effect, the meeting held Sunday afternoon was without authority because the pastor was not consulted and that church property was used for the meeting. Mr. Holder was assured by some of those who sponsored the action Sunday afternoon that certainly no one had thought of reflecting on him and that all taking part in the Sunday meeting greatly esteemed him for his deep spirituality and for his manifold noble endeavors and good work.

As a result of the meeting Thursday morning, the following resolutions were passed by a vote of 14 to 4, the negative vote being cast by the following: Dr. J. S. Sharp, A. T. McElwath, S. T. Tatum and C. F. Lawrence. Dr. Clanton being in the chair, did not vote. Some of those present Sunday afternoon were absent at the Thursday morning meeting.

The following are the resolutions above referred to: Whereas, on Sunday, August 11, 1929, in the absence of the pastor and without his knowledge, an unofficial call meeting of eleven laymen and one minister of the Grenada Methodist Church was held in the Business Men's Bible Class room of the Methodist Church.

Whereas, the object of said meeting was to demand an early investigation of the conduct of Bishop Cannon of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Whereas, resolution, denouncing Bishop Cannon's business dealings and calling for a trial of said Bishop were passed, five of the twelve present voting for, three voting against and four not voting.

Whereas, such action was heralded to the world by some of the secular press as being the action of the Methodist Church of Grenada and putting said church in a false light before the world; therefore,

Be it resolved by the official Board of the Grenada Methodist Church in call session to consider this matter on August 15, 1929, 10:00 o'clock a. m., that we express our sincere regret of this meeting and the said action taken, and that we not only deplore but resent deeply the garbled account of said meeting as appearing in the secular press, misstating the facts and also involving Dr. J. R. Countiss, president of Grenada College, as favoring the action taken which he forcibly opposed.

That we call upon the papers of the tri-state territory, publishing such reports and any others publishing same, to correct these reports by giving place to these resolutions.

Passed by the official board of the Grenada Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in call session August 15, 1929.

and forest there are not as many fires as there were formerly. Even up to four years ago almost the entire eastern section of Grenada county was ablaze, destroying untold thousands of dollars of timber, burning the grass off the fields, destroying fertilization and endangering life, residences and tenant houses. The fire extended to the adjoining county of Calhoun where it burned as many as six to eight tenant houses on one place. The people of Grenada county are showing an increased disposition to co-operate with the State Forestry Commission for the suppression of forest fires and for conservation and reforestation.

"Grenada county has spent from bond issues for roads already nearly $900,000 and has a fine system of gravel highways running into every part of the county. Federal Aid Highway No. 51 from Memphis to New Orleans, runs through Grenada county from north to south, and No. 8 from Aberdeen, Monroe county, to Greenwood, Leflore county, and from Greenwood on through the delta. The road from Aberdeen to Greenwood forms an ideal highway link from the prairie to the delta.

"The dairying interest is making progress as is also the poultry interest. The crops in Grenada county, both corn and cotton, are as good as I have ever seen in the country. The farmers are raising soy beans and lespedeza for their plow stock, cattle and hogs. Grenada, the county site, is making rapid progress getting some magnificent manufacturing plants and is an ideal miniature city with some five thousand population.

"The people of Grenada county are proud of The Grenada Sentinel which has been a splendid asset back during the days when Signago was the editor, afterwards when it was owned and controlled by the lamented J. W. Buchanan, for many years by O. F. Lawrence, and for a number of years now by his gifted son, G. M. Lawrence. O. F. Lawrence, who retired from the active editorial conduct of The Sentinel several years ago, ranks among the ablest editors of the South, and G. M. Lawrence is keeping The Sentinel, both in its news and editorial columns, up to the high standard established by his brilliant father."

Grenada will ever be known as the home of the Magnetic Walthall, soldier and statesman. In peace Walthall was as gentle as the grass of spring. In war he was the mountain storm. In his autobiography Senator Hoar of Massachusetts said that Walthall was the ideal American senator.

POWER COMPANIES ESTABLISH BUREAU

Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Detroit and others constantly seeking opportunities that may be developed by their clients, and we shall steadily seek to develop and interest new prospects. From information supplied by local chambers of commerce, we shall be able to show these prospects the advantages offered by the different communities. Where a community develops a prospect and invites our aid, we shall go everything we can to assist in bringing the industry to that community, and shall consider the matter confidential until decision has been reached."

The establishment of the in-

dustrial bureau is regarded as one of the greatest cooperative enterprises undertaken by the electric power companies in their efforts to build up the territories and communities served by their systems.

"The establishment of such an organization for stimulating industrial and agricultural development has been under consideration for some time," said H. C. Couch, who commended highly the work of local chambers of commerce of this section. He continued: "We feel that the Mid-South—the states of Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana and West Tennessee—offers opportunities greater than those of any section of similar area. Its mineral, timber, agricultural and other resources are remarkable, and afford opportunities undreamed of by many of us here. The bureau will not only serve to seek plants for the manufacture of timber, cotton, clays and other products, but to gather information concerning and induce experiments with many things now permitted to waste—such as cotton and corn stalks, rice straw, saw-mill refuse and other things. A great deal can be accomplished along this line. Outstanding examples of what has been done are the manufacture of celotex from bagasse, of pulp and paper from saw-mill refuse, and of synthetic lumber and other things from slabs and sawdust.

"While the trend of industry is Southward, the competition is keen. It is essential to have some organization such as the bureau we have established to search for prospects, interest them in the territory and supply the accurate information demanded by people before they will invest large sums in factories and other enterprises. What has already been accomplished in establishing new enterprises in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and West Tennessee proves that such efforts are successful.

"The advantages of the Mid-South are so varied and so large that we believe we can meet the requirements of almost any enterprise. Each section of the Mid-South possesses advantages, particularly its own. The establishment of one new enterprise brings about the establishment of others of a kindred or allied nature, and the entire section benefits. By recognizing that the future of every section of the Mid-South is associated with the whole, and by co-operating to advance the interests of the entire valley territory we can make this one of the greatest industrial and agricultural empires of the world. Every community large and small will progress and prosper in proportion to the advancement and expansion of the entire Mid-South, and the degree of aggressive and constructive co-operation displayed."

Mr. Shelby is a native of Arkansas, and has been engaged in industrial development and similar work for years. Before becoming associated with the Illinois Central, he was engaged in development work in Texas and other Southern states and has accumulated information and established contacts which admirably fit him to direct Mid-South development work, according to Mr. Couch, a leader in the movement for organized cooperation in industrial and agricultural development.

J. J. Doak, president of the Young Men's Business Club of Grenada, states that this plan of cooperation will be of untold benefit to his organization and other similar organizations in the state, in the matter of securing new industrial enterprises for this section. He states that the club greatly appreciates this move on the part of the Mississippi Power & Light Company, and other associated companies, in their efforts to cooperate with civic organizations, the results of which are sure to be registered in new industries and payrolls.

CALIFORNIA RANCH, CROPS, DESCRIBED

pounds tied with 5 wires. We use horse power and bale from 40 to 50 tons per day. Most of the presses are "gas-rigs" and put out around 100 tons. Hay is baled from stacks, though, some ranches do not stack but move press to central locations in hay fields and bring shocks in with back rakes. Stacking is much better as hay retains weight, color and flavor better. Eight horses are used for power on press, two at a time, and are changed every 20 bales as they go in a dead run. Another horse is used to pull cable on derrick wagon that raises fork to platform from stack. Two men feed press, and it takes two good ones as only 5 charges make a bale on horse press, 4 on gas-rigs.

We work short hours, 7 to 8 and stop for lunch at 4.

When I look back to the day in Mississippi when I thought a hundred tons of hay was a whole lot, and when it all had to be pitched up on wagons to haul to stack or barn, and if the latter, thrown in and relayed back, it makes me smile.

We have a splendid barn, well ventilated and convenient; in every way and all wired so can get plenty of light anywhere, and of course overhead carriers to put in hay. We fill barn from fields nearby so can bring in with back rakes.

The farm milks from 8 to 10 cows. It keeps 300 or more leg-horn herds and raise a few hundred turkeys.

Now in addition to sale of grain and hay, there is some second growth of rye grass, clover and hay weed and the waste grain. The land is rented to cattlemen for a few months for more money per acre than you can get for Mississippi land, the year round.

Cattle and horses seem to thrive better here than any place I ever saw. The cattle are brought in and turned in fields and shipped out in 5 or 6 weeks real fat. Whatever kind of hay we are baling is all the feed the horses get, and they keep in good order.

During the winter the boys do all the plowing themselves, so the wages all start about May 1st and last till some time in August or at latest Sept. 1. The average number of hired men is about 6 including the cook.

The fare on this ranch is splendid. The quarters are nice and is bound to be a pleasure to work here. Water is good. There are 5 wells on the ranch all run by wind mills, except one at ranch house that has a power pump. I could write all day about this splendid country, but reckon have written a lot too much.

If this is of any interest I will write some time of one of the neighboring ranches "Sleepy Hollow" certified dairy and of some of the real chicken or rather egg ranches around "Petroleum" (The largest primary egg market in the world). Just think of 40,000 or 60,000 white leghorn hens on one single farm.

GREENWOOD VETERAN COMMENTS ON BISHOP

cause is always more important than the individual and whatever good the Bishop may have done in the political arena, he has done infinitely more damage not only to his own church but to all the churches in the country. Certainly the Bishop has been a great success as a practical politician, whatever he has been in the markets of trade, but one fact is evident and that is that Bishop Cannon's career for many years has been entirely out of harmony with what he promised to be and to do when he was made a Bishop in the Church of God. It is meet and right and his bounden duty to get down and out of the Episcopalate and go the work that he delights in and for which he seems to be so well fitted in the rear ranks as a private. This is not a plea for excommunication. God forbid. There is ample room for him and for others of his ilk in the great Church to which he belongs but it surely ought to be outside the Methodist Brotherhood of Bishops. Bishop Cannon's case is one especially for the laymen of the Methodist church.

Yours truly,
T. H. B.

In the matter of the pollution of running streams by dumping creosote into them by the Ayer & Lord Tie Company.

The board having gone out to and over said Tie Plant Company with a committee of citizens and officials of said Tie Company and having gone into and made investigation of this matter reached an agreement that said company should make certain changes and improvements suggested by B. W. Smith, member of the board in order to control and prevent the escape of waste creosote into Bogue, and it appearing to the board that said officials have given assurance that they will take the steps suggested and make all other reasonable efforts to prevent the pollution of said running streams by escape of said waste creosote from their plant, it is ordered by the board that it is the sense of this board that said plant should be given opportunity to comply with their agreement and that no prosecution or further proceedings be taken against said Ayer & Lord Tie Co. by this board so long as they shall comply with said agreement and shall take all reasonable measures to prevent the escape of and pollution of said streams by said waste creosote, provided, however, this shall in no sense bind this board from taking future action in this matter, which may be necessary to protect the streams of the county from pollution and to safeguard the rights of the public from violation of the laws of the land.

$16.20 transferred from General Fund to Beat 5 Road Fund, amount of bill paid in April, 1929 for printing grand tickets, having been paid out of Beat 5 Road fund.

Land in 835 assessed to Roanwood Plantation, in Beat One should have been assessed in Beat Three, ordered that Tax Collector credit Beat Three funds with said tax collected. Board adjourned.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH MISSISSIPPI?

Politicians and near statesmen have formed a habit in the past three years of asking themselves "What's the matter with Mississippi?" and then to catch the popular approval always answer it by saying "Nothing is the matter with Mississippi." It of course catches popular approval because it is much nicer to be bragged about than criticised, but the sick people of this state would be in one terrible fix if all the doctors would walk in our house and after looking you over walk out and make the statement that there is nothing the matter with you. These near statesmen, we refer to, may flatter the masses of the people but they fool nobody. We all know that, something is wrong in Mississippi or we wouldn't be paying more taxes than our sister states. They know something is wrong in Mississippi, or we would be enjoying more of the industrial boom which is spreading over the south, than we are enjoying.

There are some interesting figures in a statement just issued by the National Industrial Conference Board. They are food for thought. They are more than that. If you will think about them enough about your state to know what has been done to her you will feel like getting a handful of barbed wire and gathering together the plunderers of Mississippi and after securing them, together drop them into a pool of old style coal oil and then offering up a prayer that the Lord will send along some lightning to set it off to spare you from committing murder.

We heard a good deal about two years ago about what horrible shape Arkansas was in from taxation. Poverty stricken Mississippians, living in a fool paradise, even felt sorry for them. Do you know what per cent of the total wealth of the State of Arkansas is collected for taxes each year? The answer is seven tenths of one per cent. Arkansas has the lowest total tax of any state in the American Union. We mean that when all of the town, city, county, district and state taxes are added together it constitute a total tax on the entire wealth of the state of seven mills. Of course Mississippi is just across the river from Arkansas and we also should have a low rate. What is your guess as to where we stand in rank as to taxation among the forty-eight states? No, we are not next to Arkansas. Alabama is fourth low. We are not next to Alabama. Georgia is eighth low. We are not next to Georgia. Tennessee is thirteenth low and we are not next to Tennessee. No, Mississippi comes right after New York. New York the wealthiest state in the American Union ranks forty-sixth in the rank of the heaviest tax payers. Mississippi, probably the poorest state in the Union of per capita wealth, ranks forty-seventh. Only one state in this nation pays more total internal state taxes than Mississippi. Arkansas pays seven mills on her total wealth and Mississippi pays over twenty-one mills or three times what Arkansas pays. And bear in mind this tax is not figured on the assessed valuations of the state which in Mississippi is seven hundred and sixty million dollars but is figured on the total actual wealth which is two and one-half billion dollars. Or boiled right down to brass tacks we are collecting an average of sixty-four mills or nearly six and one-half per cent on the total assessed valuation of this state. We are next to the heaviest taxed state in the American Union of states and yet we are one of the poorest states in the American Union in natural resources. Now we would like to see some of the near statesmen whose delight is rising up to their high heel shoes after putting their lips like a poll parrot declare "there is nothing the matter with Mississippi." Here is the matter: We need men with brains and innards to straighten the state out and chase the money grabbers into the Mississippi river. We need a people with common sense enough to vote for that kind of men rather than for politicians who promise them everything on the top side of God's earth and give them taxes instead.—Tate, County Democrat, Senatobia, Miss.
